

The $5.9 Billion Business You Can Start for $100

AI implementation: the same service, at every scale.

$5.9B

Accenture's GenAI bookings, FY2025 — while overall new bookings stayed flat.

By late 2025 they stopped reporting it separately. It touched 80% of large deals.

The market isn't paying for AI. It's paying for installation — someone who stands there until the thing actually runs.

Same service. Three price points.

01 $5.9B — Accenture

Enterprise scale. The proof of demand.

02 ~$40K/mo — boutique agencies

Reported, not audited. Treat as the ceiling story.

03 $2,000 — a solo operator's first project

One operator. One month. The entry point.

$5– 6K/mo

The documented floor — boring, and believable.

The $40K/mo number making the rounds comes from a creator-economy blog, not audited books.
Plan around the floor, not the ceiling.

The whole stack: under $100/mo.

01 Claude or ChatGPT — $20–40

The brain: analysis, drafts, increasingly the build.

02 n8n / Make / Zapier — ~free self-hosted

The runtime that executes the workflow.

03 Airtable or Notion

The client-facing dashboard. Make it clean — it's what they think they're paying for.

04 Loom

Async delivery. Walkthroughs instead of meetings.

Cost of goods on a $2,000 project? Rounds to zero.
The entire game is finding the first client.

Weeks 1–4, not someday.

01 Start with the industry you've already worked in Operators buy from operators. Your track record is the qualification.

02 Pick the bleeding workflow

Missed calls, intake, follow-up — whatever visibly costs money.

03 Install two tools where they actually run

Charge for the outcome, not the seats.

04 Every install surfaces the next project

~1 in 2 AI projects pulls through more work. It becomes a relationship.

8K/mo

The honest year-one range — an estimate, flagged as one.

What actually compounds: income that isn't a paycheck, a skill stack, and a client list that is distribution.

The full breakdown is free.
